STORY TELLING OWLS

THEIR FUNNY YARNS MADE THE ADIRONDACKS RING WITH MIRTH.

he Jovial Birds Were So Laughter Prevoking That the Side Splitting Centagion Spread to Their Haman Auditors, and Even the Locus Bowled With Delight.

"What amused our party most up in the Adirondacks," said a Scranton men, "was an entertainment given to us by a flock of story teiling lowls. Our camp prepared from Abietine Balsam, ob- was away back in the wilderness of tained from a rare species of pine Horkmer county, and we had hardly found only in California and Norway, and from Yerba Santa, better known

> "They reminded us of a lot of drummers in a smoking car, and they had such jolly fun it became contagious. Wo all rolled and laughed over the fun the big eyed birds were having up in the tree, and before long the side splitting contagion attacked some loons out ou the lake, which fairly yelled with delight whenever the fun loving owls guffawed and shrieked and shouted over a right good yarn told by one of their

"Once in awhile a story was so funny before the knob was reached that we could hear two or three of the feathered listeners enicker and chuckle under their breath, and when the end came the entire flock made the woods ring The jovial birds had met expressly to swap experiences of the night before, and they talked so plainly that we could easily keep a run of their anecdotes as we lay on our beds of sprace boughs.

"One of the owls told about how a big rat that he had caught by the back rat that he had caught by the back yanked itself loose and showed fight. The owl described how he had let the rat flatter itself that it was going to lick him, how he finally bit his tail off at throot, and how the rat then went squealroot, and how the rat then went squeating and zigzagging around with ne aidder to guide its movements. The picture so amused the eager auditors that they fell into the most violent fits of hughter, the definition of the company, on Friday, December 15, 1898, at 2 colock F. M. of that day, to pay the delinquent assessment and expenses of the company. they were so tickled.

"Another owl described the tusale ho had had with a tough old jack hare in a swamp. He said that the hare had carried him along through the rushes and over logs for some distance after he had got his claws in its back, and that he gt last brought the hare up standing by keeping one claw in its hide and catching hold of a bush with his other claw. The hare rolled over and over as soon as the owl let go of the bush, and the owi said that his feathers pointed in all outifier when he finally got the best of the lines. Peal after peal of laughter fallowed the wines and Brandies, Claret and narrative. "Another owl told about "

"But the story that fairly upset the whole party of nocturnal reisterers and made them hoot and screech and fir to all over the tree for at least five tautes was told by an owl with an also voice. He said that he felt like kicking up some mischief the night before, so he sailed out to the settlement, settled down there was no light and began to tap on the panes with his bill. The folks were asleep, so he flitted to the opposite side of the house and tapped there. Nobody stirred, and he kept going from one side of the nouse to the other till a woman got up, struck a light and began to try the windows to see if they were fast. peered in at her, and she started to

"When she came to his window, he scream so hard that in a moment her husband sprang out of bed, and four chilaren in their nightclothes came running down stairs and shouting, 'Mamma, what's the matter?" The woman couldn't tell what the matter was, although her hushand and young ones kept coaxing her to, but at length she caught her breath long enough to say she had seen a speek at the window.

"At that the man dashed out and began to search around the house, and the owl said he flew to the top of a balsam tree, where he sat till the man went back, when he alighted on the window sill again. The man was angry at his wife for making such a rumpus about nothing, so he drove the children back to bed and went to jawing her like sixty. She jawed back, and they had it hot and heavy till the man got up and cuffed her. Then she threw a dipper of water on him in the bed, and in jumping out at her he knocked the lamp oil the stand and put out the light. The owl said he listened to their quarreling and fighting in the dark till he could stand it no longer, when he flew back to the woods. His recital filled his listeners with merriment, and it was several minutes before they calmed down for another anecdote.

"Well, sir, those jovial owls continued to tell stories till 3 o'clock, when we all became so sleepy that we lost all interest in their amusing tales. The loons out on the lake laughed like all possessed whenever the owls did, and the two gangs of midnight merrymakers kept up their racket till we had to go out and drive the owls away by firing our revolvers."-Scranton Letter.

the midst of the earth."

This can only refer to the scenes of the passion and of the holy sepulcher. The midst or spot of the earth must, therefore, be sought in that vicinity. The belief that the center of the earth is at Jerusalem is very ancient, for it is alluded to by St. Ephrem in his reference to Noah's prayer over the bones of Adam. St. Ephrem says, "And Noah buried Adam's bones in the middle of the earth." A certain round stone in the temple of Delphi is also spoken of by the ancient writers as being the "nave?

or center of the earth." Orestes takes refuge there when pursued by Euminides. Findar also makes mention of the exact location of the center of the world, and Pensanius, like Herr Schick, also had the pleasure of beholding the only genuino central hub of our planet. He, however, locates it at Delphi instead of at Jerusalem. "It is made," he said, "of white stone, smooth and polished, and is no doubt the middle point of the world."-Philadelphia Press.

A Mean Trick.

A lawyer defending a promissory note went to lunch, leaving his books and citations on the table in the courtroom. The opposing counsel sneaked back into the room and changed the places of all his bookmarks. In the afternoon the In rendering his opinion he said:

"I was inclined after hearing argument of counsel for defendant to nonsuit plaintiff, but I find, after referring to the authorities quoted by counsel none of them bear on this case, and I am led to think that the gentleman has been willfully trying to insult the court. He has referred me to an action of an Irishman who sued the proprietor of a monkey for damages for biting him to a case of arson, one of burglary, two of petty larceny and three divorce cases, none of which bears on an action to recover on a promissory note. Perhaps the grossest insult to the court is refer ring to 'Duckworth versus Boozyman, an action charging defendant with reach of promise. Judgment for plaintiff with costs."

The lawyer never knew what the matter was and to this day thinks the judge was out of his mind. - Pearson's Weekly.

Fined a Dead Man.

Down in southwestern Texas, just about midway between Houston in the east and El Paso in the west, and very near to the Rio Grande, the Southern Pacific railway has built over the Pecos river the highest bridge in the United states. Just before this bridge was finished one of the workmen fell from it and was of course killed.

The county judge was brought from Langtry, the town nearest to the bridge, to hold a "crowner's 'quest." The judge arrived with a great concourse of people. all auxious to serve on the jury. Prochags were begun by examining the body of the dead man. Upon this were found a loaded revolver and $40 in cash. Perceiving this, the judge said:

"There am't . . . . . to do about this rase, gentle . . . the jury. The man's dend, as as perfectly plain how he met his seath. But what I want to know s, what was he doing with that guni That's against the laws of Texas. He ain't iero to explain, but because a man takes it into his kead to put on wings and mount to the skies is no reason why the great state of Texas should be defrauded. Law is law and justice is justice. I fine him $40 for carrying a deadly weapon."
It is needless to say that the fine was oaid.--Harper's Magazine.

The Gallows Plant.

During the middle ages the botanists, or old "herbalists," gave currency to many curious stories concerning the growth, form, etc., of mandrake or May apple, which finally resulted in its being given the name of "gallows plant." The pseudo scientists of that time declared that mandrake would grow in no other place ex-cept upon which some terrible crime had been committed. The roots were formerly supposed to bear a strong resemblance to the human form and are fig ared in the old "Herbals" which lie be fore me as I write, even distinguished as to sex, the female of the plant having long hair; the male, heavy beard .- St. Louis Republic.

Hog and hominy is the popular dish in some pertions of the south, just as pork and beans delight the palate of the New Englanders and catrish and waffles appeal to the taste of Philadelphians. How dearly a Virginian loves ham may be inferred by the following conversation reported by a homo coming commercial traveler:

While riding in from an interior town in the stage he fell into conversation with the driver. The talk finally turned upon hunting, the driver informing his fare that the woods thereabout abounded in game. Passing a stream, the traveler asked if it contained fish. "Lots of them," was the reply.

"What kind?" "Mostly trout," said the driver. "All these mountain streams are full of trout." "They must be fine eating," was the next remark. "Fine cating!" exclaimed the driver. Well, I should say so. You just go up to the mountains and catch half a dozen trout about 10 or 12 inches long, clean 'em without washing 'em, rub in some salt, roll 'em in Injun meal and bake 'em in the ashes. Good eatin!
